DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Gove-Brooks House is located on the Tilghman Island Road between the Island and Sherwood, overlooking Dun Cove of Harris Creek.

The house is presently a two story frame dwelling with a two story wing, covered with grey shingles. The outline of the original 'A' roof, as well as the original cornice can be seen on the gable and between storys on the facade respectively. The house appears to have been brought to its present state around the 1920's or 30's.

On the first story is a center door with two windows on each side. On the second are three pair of windows.

The plan now consists of a stair hall and two rooms in the main section. The two rooms both have walls of raised paneling typical of late 18th century. The two rooms were built in different periods but it is uncertain which part came first. In the south west corner of the building is a stair enclosed behind the paneling, but this has not been used since the house was remodeled.

Virtually all of the other trim has been removed or covered.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Gove-Brooks House is important because it retains some of its original fabric from the 18th century. It should be totally studied to glean what information is available on the history of buildings in this area in the 18th century.
